

ANACER STATEMENT

Italian ports are fully operational

This is to assure all parties involved in the export and shipment of agricultural goods to Italy that the Italian government and the authorities of Italian ports have taken all necessary measures to ensure the safety of both crew members and workers on the ground.

Workers wear protective equipment, and we are increasingly using electronic documentation to avoid the exchange of paper documents.

In addition, only those crew members who, according to the vessel ledger, have a high body temperature are required to stay on board. All other crew members are free to leave the vessel, provided they wear adequate protective equipment. Measures are generally taken to limit contacts between crews on vessels and ground staff.

Ships are supplied with all that is required and cleaned as per the usual standards.
